P. T. A. Group Observes National Founders Day

ABOUT THIS — AND — ABOUT THAT

by Oliver Gedeist

In most meetings the newcomer is expected to rise and be seen. I sorta got ahead of that last week, when Mrs. Semmler ran my picture on the front page... But, since you have asked me to say something (now, now I'm only making believe), here it is.

Some people are quiet and retiring, and others are never quiet and never retire. Not being quiet often has its disadvantages, but in the newspaper business, not having the habit of retiring too early has its definite advantages. However, I'll try to be reasonably quiet. Really, I like to listen, and I'll try to retire from your presence early enough to avoid boring you too much, well, I'll try, anyway.

What was in my mind to say is this: I feel honored to walk in the steps of a man who served you so faithfully for so long and who had the universal good will of so many people.

You know, as I know, that a stranger can never supplant a friend. That is as it should be.

In coming into this new responsibility, it is my purpose to carry the responsibility in such a way that the memory of William Semmler will be integrated in and be a basis for every business transaction conducted. The Semmler standard shall never be lowered.

Now, about knowing you. I want to get acquainted. But is it earnestly hoped that you will overlook a BIG FAILING. Yes, it's big. Very likely I will not remember your name the second time (huh, as if I EVER remembered a name the second time) I meet you. But truly I shall mean well, and if I behave myself, (I promise to try real hard) maybe you will know me long enough for me to greet you by calling your name.

A newcomer, my hope and purpose, to serve you—and well.

CONGRESS ACTS TO AID IN PAPER SHORTAGE

Washington, D. C. (Special)—Congressman Fred E. Busby announced that a special Congressional committee has been appointed to study the serious shortage of newsprint and find remedies for the situation.

With the shortage worse than in war time, congressional members are taking steps to aid newspapers in securing enough newsprint to continue issuing their regular editions.

Publishers in recent months have found costs of publishing mounting, in line with the general increase in costs of everything.

CORRECTION

In George J. Hasenjaeger's auction sale advertisement on another page, a typographical error in writing the copy resulted in the offer of a 10-29 International tractor, while in fact what is being offered is a Farmall F-20 tractor on rubber.

The National Congress of Parents & Teachers marked its Golden Jubilee anniversary with a Founder's Day banquet at 6:30 Thursday evening in the parlors of the Ottawa Street Methodist church in Joliet, with approximately 200 guests attending.

Mrs. Frank J. Chmelik, president of the Will County Council, presided and led the group in the pledge to the flag. The Rev. Walter B. Morgan pastor of the church, gave the invocation.

Miss Ardis Ege accompanied by Mrs. John T. Robertson at the piano, led the community sing. Several piano selections were presented by Ronald Medberg. A trio from the Lockport township high school, including Rose Brankey, Maxine Johnson and Elaine Ott, favored the audience with, "Among My Souvenirs", "Who", and "Moon Mist." Jerry Norton accompanied at the piano.

Mrs. A. Y. Wilson, district director, introduced Mrs. Frank A. Damm of Chicago, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers. Mrs. Damm explained that Mrs. Alice McLellan Birney and Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst were the founders of the N.C.P.T., under the name of Congress of Mothers. Later, the name of N.C.P.T., was adopted.

The first meeting of the group was held in Washington, D.C., Feb. 17, 1897. "Parents should co-operate," Mrs. Damm said, "and when they all agree, the child will know what is right, and will feel secure and consequently form good habits. Education must start with the parents, and they and the teachers should talk things over. In this way the teacher may be able to help the child by knowing his weakness."

The meeting closed with the benediction by the Rev. Mr. Morgan. The speakers' table was centered with an artistic bouquet of blue and white spring flowers and centering the other tables were the gold numerals "50". Blue tapers in crystal candleholders flanked the portraits of Mrs. Birney and Mrs. Hearst on the piano and were also used on the tables.

A large representation from Frankfort, New Lenox and Mokena attended.

Book Club Plan Given Official Sanction; Village Hall To Be Used

Neighborhood Store Problems Is Subject

A program designed entirely to reach the problems of neighborhood merchants has been arranged for the Smaller Stores Clinic which is being held in the Morrison hotel on March 18th, according to Fred Goerlitz, Managing Director of the Chicago Retail Merchants Association, one of the organizations which is sponsoring the event.

"The entire program," according to Goerlitz, "has been planned with the neighborhood merchant in mind. We have always felt that his problems are even more serious and important than those of the larger stores and that a meeting, such as we have planned, should be arranged at periodic intervals to bring him practical guidance and assistance in the operation of his store."

"Each one of the speakers for the March 18 meeting," Goerlitz added, "is thoroughly familiar with the problems of neighborhood merchants and all talks will be given from his point of view."

The Clinic will begin at 10:00 am. and continue until about 5:00 pm. A registration fee includes attendance and luncheon. Reservations may be made thru one of the sponsoring organizations, the Chicago Retail Merchants Association; the Chicago Retail Druggists Association; the Chicago Retail Furniture Association; the Chicago Retail Hardware Association and the Illinois Federation of Retail Associations.

Mokena is to have a library. The project, which has been under discussion by members of the Mokena Book Club since last fall, when a committee was appointed to work out plans, was assured when the Mokena village board approved a request for the use of the village hall two periods weekly.

Mayor Everett Cooper on Wednesday announced the action of the board the regular meeting Tuesday evening. "The library will not start on a grand scale," Mrs. Arthur Shoop, Book Club committee chairman, told the News-Bulletin, "but the Book Club feels that it will be a beginning and members hope for expansion of the plan so that in time Mokena will provide a library equal to the needs of the public."

The village board approved use of the village hall by the library on Tuesday afternoons and Wednesday evenings, Mayor Cooper said, and the village will supply the hall and light and heat without charge.

Supervision of the library will be voluntary and under the responsibility of the Book club.

At the beginning, only a few more than one hundred volumes will be available for use, but these will include a wide variety of fiction and non-fiction books.

No public appeal for funds is contemplated, it was stated, although others favoring the establishment of a library have intimate a willingness to support the program with funds.

Likewise no public appeal for contributions of books has been made, and the Book Club, it was stated has no present plans for appealing for books. However, it is also known that the committee would accept with pleasure any contributions of books suitable for public reading, whether fiction or scientific type. Likewise, the committee would accept funds on behalf of the Book Club, but Mrs. Shoop made clear that solicitation is not being made by the club or members individually. Persons desiring to contribute to this highly worthwhile library program should consult either Mrs. Shoop or other members of the Club.

The committee expects to formulate plans for opening the library at an early date.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

Two Regions Wield Power
In New Senate Committees

By WALTER A. SHEAD

WNU Washington Correspondent.

(Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of articles dealing with new congressional committees and their chairman.

WASHINGTON. — North Central and New England regions wield the balance of political power in the senate as a result of the new committee setup in the 80th congress under terms of the congressional reorganization act.

Of the 14 new senate committee chairmen, eight come from the North Central region, including the states of Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas. The New England region is represented by two chairmen from New Hampshire, one from Maine and one from Vermont. West Virginia and Colorado are the only other states represented by committee chairmen. The Middle Atlantic, South Central and Pacific regions are entirely unrepresented.

The list of senate committees and chairmen continues:

Banking and Currency

CHARLES W. TOBEY (N. H.), new chairman of the banking and currency committee, is an independent Republican who votes against his party as often as with it.

Tobey broke with the majority of the Republican senators to support reciprocal trade agreements in 1945 and to oppose restrictive OPA amendments that year. (He changed his mind about OPA by July, 1946, however.) He also voted for the loan to Britain, and, like most Republicans, opposed the nomination of George E. Allen to Reconstruction Finance corporation.

A business man turned politician, Tobey was at one time president of the F. M. Hoyt Shoe Co. and also has had experience in agriculture, banking and insurance. He is a former president of Manchester chamber of commerce. He served three non-consecutive terms as a member of the New Hampshire house of representatives, including one as speaker, and one term in the state senate. He was governor of New Hampshire in 1929-30 and was elected to congress in 1932. After three terms in the house, he was elected to the senate in 1938.

Tobey was a delegate to the United Nations monetary conference, which drew up plans for the World Bank and the International Monetary Fund, at Bretton Woods, N. H., in July, 1944.

Expenditures

GEORGE D. AIKEN (Vt.) is new chairman of the committee on expenditures in the executive departments, which is assigned the function of keeping tab on executive agencies. The committee is likely to be primarily an investigative body and may be used as the vehicle for the Republican majority in the senate to investigate the Democratic executive branch of the government. It also will have jurisdiction over governmental reorganization. Under Democratic control, the committee has been inactive in the past.

A Vermont farmer, Aiken is 54 years old and has been in the senate since 1940. Before that he had been active in politics as a member of the state legislature, lieutenant governor and governor. He is the author of "Speaking from Vermont," a discussion of current problems, published in 1938.

During the 79th congress, Aiken cast more votes against the majority of his party than any other Republican. The records show that he voted with the majority of Republicans only 20 per cent of the time on issues where there was a Republican-Democratic split.

Finance

EUGENE D. MILLIKIN (Colo.), new chairman of the finance committee, which handles tax bills, is by no means enthusiastic over plans of house Republican leaders to cut individual income taxes 20 per cent straight across the board.

Writing a tax bill, Millikin says, "is not an exercise in logic; it's an exercise in necessity." Before undertaking tax revision he wants to see the budget balanced and a long-term debt reduction plan adopted. Then, if possible, he wants to make a thorough study of the tax structure before committing himself to any specific tax-cutting proposal. Millikin's past record on taxation and financial matters shows that he voted to prohibit the $25,000 salary limitation in 1943, against extension of the reciprocal trade act in 1945, and to override the tax bill veto in 1944. (The vetoed tax bill was criticized by President Roosevelt for failing to provide enough revenue and for granting unwarranted tax relief, "not for the needy but for the greedy.") On controversial matters Millikin voted with the majority of his party 84 per cent of the time in the 79th congress. He has the best attendance record in the senate.

Millikin, who is 56 years old, has been in the senate since 1941. In addition to taxes, the finance committee has jurisdiction over tariffs, social security and veterans' affairs.

Foreign Affairs

ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG (Mich.) second ranking Republican in the senate and one of the prime makers of American foreign policy, has two top jobs in the 80th congress — president pro tempore of the senate and chairman of the foreign relations committee.

On no other committee will policy be less affected by Republican majorities than on foreign relations, where Sen. Tom Connally (Dem., Tex.) as the outgoing chairman, and Vandenberg, as the leading Republican, have collaborated closely ever since the San Francisco conference of the United Nations in 1945. Besides going to San Francisco together, Connally and Vandenberg have been co-delegates to the first general assembly of the United Nations in London, the council of foreign ministers in Paris and the second general assembly in New York. They frequently have taken occasion to emphasize their complete agreement on foreign policy and their support of former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

Vandenberg is 63 years old and before entering the senate was editor and publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald. He long has been active in local and state Republican politics and is an authority on Alexander Hamilton, a subject on which he has written several books. He won the 1946 Collier award for distinguished congressional service.

Public Lands

HUGH BUTLER (Neb.), is new chairman of the public lands committee, which combines the functions of the five old committees on public lands and surveys, Indian affairs, irrigation and reclamation, mines and mining, and territories and insular affairs.

A regular, party-line Republican now beginning his second term, Butler easily won re-election last fall after a victorious primary fight in which he was opposed by Gov. Dwight Griswold, who had the support of Harold E. Stassen.

Butler is 69 years old and operated a flour milling and grain business before going to the senate. In his youth he worked as a construction engineer for Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad. He is an ex-president of Omaha Grain exchange and National Grain Dealers association and has been active in Nebraska civic, educational and religious organizations.

Butler was in line for the more important finance committee chairmanship, but passed it up to take public lands.

Blind Girl Quits School To Keep Dog

LOS ANGELES.—Forced to give up her high school classes or part with her seeing-eye guide dog, Patsy Ruth Fergus, 16-year-old blind girl, decided she couldn't part with her dog even if it meant giving up the social life she craved at school.

Despite pleas of Patsy, her parents and classmates, the city board of education decreed she couldn't take Lucky, a pure white German shepherd, to school any more. It promised instead to send a tutor to her trailer home.

"It'll be lonely staying home all alone," Patsy said, biting her quivering lip. "But I can't give up Lucky ever. She's the only eyes I've got."

Her main concern now is to rush through her last three semesters of high school so she can enter junior college, where, she adds, "they let you take dogs to classes."

OTHER SIDE OF UNRRA

WASHINGTON. — All the angry shouting and politicking which surrounded UNRRA during the last two years have given taxpayers the general impression that this global agency was just tossing money down the drain. That, however, was not the case. Here are some little-known facts about UNRRA's remarkable accomplishments.

UNRRA supplied enough grain to make 11,500,000 loaves of bread for Europe, prevented Europe from becoming a disease-ravaged, epidemic-plagued continent, rebuilt health departments all over Europe, supplied them with DDT, penicillin and sulphadiazine. It inoculated hundreds of thousands against typhus and typhoid, thus preventing the type of epidemic that ravaged Europe after World War I.

Last year UNRRA fed at least one meal a day to five million children, helped reclaim 10 million acres of flood land for planting this year. It took care of one million displaced persons, provided them food and shelter, saw hundreds of thousands of them safely home.

Despite its errors on the political side, UNRRA did two things. The agency made nations work together in harmony, made the postwar world a better world for millions who otherwise might have perished. It is only fair to remember this side of the picture.

GOVERNMENT JOBS

Memo to government workers: Don't get too excited about those statements by Representatives John Taber and Harold Knutson that the congressional budget committee, of which they are members, favors immediate reduction of government personnel by one million workers.

Inside fact is that most members of the committee, excluding Congressmen Taber and Knutson, are apprehensive that a too-sudden slash in the personnel question will be referred for further study to the senate and house appropriations committees.

When a decision finally is made, the reduction in government personnel will be much closer to 500,000 than one million.

BEATS TRUMAN AT FARMING

La Verne Hall of Westby, Wis., champion 4-H farmer of America, who has made $53,000 at the age of 20, called to shake hands with President Truman, who never was able to make a go of farming in Missouri.

GOP Congressman William Stevenson, who escorted his young constituent, told the President how Hall was chosen "national achievement winner" among junior farmers at the International Livestock exposition in Chicago. One of the prizes was a silverware set from the White House.

"I'd like to meet more of your type," said Mr. Truman, perhaps remembering how his own farm was sold for its mortgage. "You young Americans are doing great things for the country. It must feel pretty good to be a successful farmer at the age of 20. When did you get started?"

His visitor replied that he started at the age of 11 with one pure-blooded calf and two Poland China hogs. He did not mention that his farm holdings are now worth $53,000.

QUEER VISITORS

The late FDR once told a visitor he was considering sending an ambassador from the American people to the state department, since that department sometimes seemed so out of tune with the rest of the USA. Unfortunately, that condition hasn't changed.

While thousands of Hitler's victims still sweat it out in displaced persons camps unable to get visas, the state department has been throwing the doors open to various interesting visitors. These include Austria's former premier, Kurt Schuschnigg, Pastor Niemoller—who reiterates his belief in a powerful Germany—and now, one of the key Fascist operatives of the Near East, Ahmed Hussein.

Hussein arrived ostensibly as a correspondent for Cairo newspapers but he is still head of the pro-Fascist "Young Egypt" party, and an intimate of the infamous "Mufti" of Palestine, whom Hitler chose as his Fuehrer of the Middle East. Since reaching these shores, Hussein has cast off his role of newsman and has registered with the justice department as a foreign agent representing "Young Egypt." He has been selling his special brand of pro-Fascist, anti-British venom.

CAPITAL CHAFF

It hasn't leaked out, but Brig. Gen. Elliott Roosevelt was recommended for a permanent reserve commission by the army reserve officers commissioning board, headed by Lt. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle. But when President Truman sent the nominations to the senate, Elliott's name was omitted. On the list, however, were several GOP opponents of the Roosevelts, particularly former Maj. Gen. Pat Hurley, who blasted both the President and the state department a year ago.

Roller Skating Has Become
One of Our Leading Sports

Since 1935, roller skating has developed into one of America's largest participant sports, says Collier's. Today, more than 12,000,000 persons a week pay admissions up to $1 to skate in about 4,000 rinks, some of which represent investments of $300,000.

As most of the music is furnished by recordings which must be timed to a certain number of metronome beats, seven companies specialize in making these records for roller skating.

Save material by remaking your old curtains! Instructions 7005 has directions. Our improved pattern—visual with easy-to-see charts and photos, and complete directions—makes needlework easy.

Agricultural News - Letter

Prepared by Agricultural Dept., Chicago Journal of Commerce

A Price Problem

THE dominant factor in price advances of agricultural products in recent months has been the extremely heavy purchase of grains and livestock products by government agencies for shipment abroad. . . . Indications are that those activities will continue for awhile, or possibly until early Spring. . . . At that time conditions surrounding the progress of 1947 crops, both in the Northern Hemisphere and in Europe, will be of major importance. . . . Yields of European farms will determine the quantity of supplies to be moved from the surplus producing countries in the coming twelve months.

Since much of the food that has gone overseas in the last six months has been of an emergency relief nature, or to cover needs till 1947 production is ready for harvest, it appears possible that the peak of demand for United States products, for a long time to come, is now being witnessed. Disappointing crop yields can prolong the current situation, however.

As matters stand now, many large areas are expected to produce this year a greater portion of their needs than any period since the beginning of the war. . . . Too, several countries now receiving relief should be able to finance a large part of their import requirements, thus enabling them to seek for supplies competitively in world markets. . . . If it is decided to carry out Mr. Hoover's suggestions of increasing rations in Germany and General MacArthur's requests for Japan, the demand for grains, fats and dried milk will probably make up for whatever gains in production appear in other sections.

With so many uncertain factors prevailing, wide price fluctuations are expected to occur from time to time. . . . No sustained decline of a severe nature appears in sight at present.

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

A Definition of Our Town

Somebody defined our town just the other day as "A place where the people talk about you behind your back, and come to wait on you when you're sick."

I've got to admit there's something to it. A lot of our folks are inclined to be pretty outspoken and quick to criticize . . . even about little things, like a woman's hat, or a man's preference for a glass of beer, or the color of Cy Hartman's new barn.

But when anyone's in trouble, those differences and points of criticism are forgotten . . . and folks become neighborly and helpful, like they really are.

From where I sit, criticism never did much harm to anybody, so long as folks don't let it guide their actions . . . so long as they respect our individual preferences, whether they apply to hats or beer. That's the way it is in our town, anyway, and I hope that it's the same in yours.

Joe Marsh

"Somehow, Telephone work seems different!"

"I SUPPOSE a lot of girls feel the same way about the work they do. But somehow—to me—there's an unusual fascination about telephone work. The people are so pleasant—so friendly. The work's important—and it's fun, too. I feel I'm part of a vital service."

This feeling is typical. It illustrates why the average service of Illinois Bell's more than 40,000 employees is unusually long. Nearly 14,000 have been with the company more than ten years. It shows they believe the telephone company is "a good place to work." And it explains why telephone people take more than just a "workaday" interest in their jobs.

These are the people responsible for your telephone service. And when we get all the equipment we need, they'll make your service even finer and faster than ever before.

Shall I Buy That Farm

Here are some thoughts about buying farms—not so much for farm people as for people who would like to go to the country—either to just a small place or a full scale farm.

A good many people write to the College of Agriculture at the University of Illinois for advice on the subject. The man who usually answers such letters is J. B. Cunningham, farm management extension specialist in the agricultural economics department at the College.

Cunningham says that, since land values are at the highest levels in the past 25 years, he would caution an inexperienced operator against investing savings in a farm at this time. Some of these people have as much as $15,000 to invest, but Cunningham says $15,000 is not enough capital to buy an efficient unit now, and he advises against contracting a heavy mortgage to be paid out of future farm earnings.

His usual recommendation is that the prospective farmer will be far better off if he waits until the land boom is over, and he adds that we may have another bust, like that following the first world war.

Another suggestion is that if the man wants to farm, and doesn't have experience, it would be a good idea to work for at least a year or so as a hired hand—to get some idea of how a farm is operated, and whether that's really what he wants to do.

As for small places in the country, five acres, or even 25 or 30, Cunningham says they can't be depended on for an income large enough to live on. They may be a fine place to live for someone who works in nearby town and uses the little place only for a garden, and perhaps poultry and a cow or two. The price for those small places doesn't depend so much on the quality of the soil as on other factors, buildings, nearness to town, roads schools and so on.

the same period for 1946. The 1946 fall pig crop estimate was 11 percent smaller than the estimate one year earlier, and the smallest since 1940. Hog prices from now until the fall of 1947, are expected to be favorable enough to justify feeding hogs to heavy weights.

Winter of 1947-48. Although at present there is a great deal of uncertainty about the prospective demand for meats in the winter of 1947-48, pigs raised this spring should provide a profitable market for the 1946 corn crop. The outlook for hogs which can be marketed in the fall and early winter months is more favorable than for late spring pigs. However, if farrowings do not substantially exceed the 6 percent indicated by farmers in early December 1946, even late spring or early summer pigs are expected to be a better outlet for corn than the cash market. With an average number of pigs raised per litter, the 6 percent increase in farrowing would result in a 1947 spring pig crop of 53 million head, an increase of only 1 percent from 1946.

Hog Price Outlook

Spring and Summer. Hog prices are expected to remain at present levels and may strengthen somewhat during the spring and summer months. The seasonal peak in hog slaughter for this winter is past. Market receipts of hogs will gradually become smaller through the late winter and early spring months, but receipts of cattle will be fairly large.

Some increase in hog marketings will occur as the 1946 fall raised pigs come to market in the late spring and early summer, but marketings during that period will be smaller than during

"I BROIL AN ENTIRE MEAL AT ONCE... IT'S QUICK, EASY AND FUEL*-SAVING!"

Menu

Ground beef patties
Tomato halves
Mushrooms
Canned fruit
Coffee
Potato slices
Cookies

Wise housekeepers have borrowed "broiler meals" from time-saving little brides because meals like this cut down on time spent in the kitchen and on fuel consumption. Contrary to the general idea that broiler meals must be steak or chops (and therefore costly), broiler meals may be planned to fit any budget. Here is one your family will love... try it:

Place beef patties in center of broiler so surface of meat is about 3 inches from tip of flame. When browned on one side turn over, and place mushrooms, tomatoes sprinkled with buttered crumbs, and sliced boiled potatoes brushed with fat, on the broiler pan. Broil 8 to 10 minutes longer, and serve.

Broiling an entire meal at once is good fuel economy. By selecting foods which all broil at the same speed you utilize your gas range to best advantage. Plan at least one "broiler meal" this week. Use your gas range wisely and economically.

*SAVE GAS on NEAR ZERO DAYS!

War-born delays in the expansion of the natural gas pipeline make it necessary to temporarily restrict new space heating and industrial uses... to protect the supply to homes and essential needs.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, March 2, was:

"CHRIST JESUS"

The Golden Text was: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isa. 9: 6).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible:

"The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world. . . . Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples; And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! . . . One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. He first findeth his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messiah, which is, being interpreted, the Christ" (John 1: 29, 35-36, 40-41).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The advent of Jesus of Nazareth marked the first century of the Christian era, but the Christ is without beginning of years or end of days. Throughout all generations both before and after the Christian era, the Christ, as the spiritual idea, the reflection of God,—has come with some measure of power and grace to all prepared to receive Christ, Truth. . . . The Christ is incorporeal, spiritual,—yea the divine image and likeness, dispelling the illusions of the senses; the Way, the Truth, and the Life, healing the sick and casting out evils, destroying sin, disease and death" (pp. 333, 332).

AT 175th STREET

DUTCH COURAGE . . . This is a street in "Bunker Valley," near Breskens, where the Germans once boasted an "impregnable" line of fortifications. Dutch families now occupy the bunkers. One woman has her weekly wash hanging out to dry on the remains of a pillbox. The lady in foreground is standing near the doorway of her pillbox home. Shell cases are used to make a fence. Walcheren was the key to the great port of Antwerp, and the Germans held it.

STARVING CHILDREN OF ROMANIA . . . Starving, ill-clad Romanian children and their mother hesitantly approach the depot where American Red Cross clothing and medical supplies are being distributed. The Red Cross is financing and supervising distribution of $3,500,000 worth of food for relief of 500,000 starving people in Moldavia, Northern Romania.

SEEK LOST GOLD MINE . . . Mr. and Mrs. William J. Middaugh of Joplin, Mo., are shown with the pack burro they will use on their trek into the Superstition mountain area of Arizona in search of the famous Lost Dutchman gold mine. The 59-year-old pistol packin' grandmother blew into Phoenix with a yellowed map to the mine handed down by her great-great uncle.

GOING DOWN TO THE TEA IN SIPS . . . These solemn-faced gentlemen are the seven members of the U. S. board of tea experts as they are passing judgment on between 500 and 600 different samples of tea which has been submitted by the trade. Future tea grades will be made, the result of these tasting tests. This method of testing had not been conducted during the war years. Members of the testing board are all experts, and will not swallow any of the tea.

BRIGA AND TENDA GOVERNOR . . . Under terms of the new peace treaty, the Italian provinces of Briga and Tenda are to go to France. Pictured here is M. Bourguet, newly appointed French governor of these provinces.

WARNS CONGRESS . . . William Green, president of the AFL, as he warned the senate labor committee that enactment of most of the pending labor bills would provoke industrial strife which would seriously undermine U. S. in world's position.

NEW MAN . . . They made a new man of Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery during his visit to Moscow by presenting the hero of El Alamein with a caracul and a sable coat and a caracul cap. He doesn't look the same without the familiar beret and sweater.

LOST ARM AND LEGS—MARRIES . . . Miss Clover Kerr, Huntington Park, Calif., who lost both legs and one arm in automobile accident, is shown walking down the aisle with man of her choice, Clark R. Taylor, Roseburg, Ore., as they were married.

NEW DEMOCRATIC DIRECTOR . . . Gael Sullivan, Illinois, who resigned as second assistant postmaster general to become executive director of the Democratic national committee. He has been mentioned to replace Fannagan.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Subsistence Checks

As a result of thousands of complaints received by Veterans' administration concerning delays in receiving subsistence checks by veterans in school, VA is urging both the veterans and the schools to give better cooperation with the administration as preparations are made for second semester enrollment throughout the country.

Here are some reasons why subsistence checks fail to arrive or are delayed.

1—Veterans fail to report changes in address when they move, so checks are automatically returned to the treasury and held there. Government checks never are forwarded by post offices.

2—VA receives incomplete information from the school or the veteran. Subsistence checks must be delayed until complete facts are obtained about marriage status, wages, date of enrollment and other conditions are reported.

3—Schools may delay payments by being slow in sending in necessary papers. One large midwestern university last fall waited until six weeks after enrollments to give VA necessary papers to pay 450 veterans.

4—Veterans transfer from a school in one regional office area to one in a different jurisdiction so delay is unavoidable while VA records are transferred. Early in January about 50,000 veterans in school more than 30 days had not received subsistence checks. Many were in schools not yet approved by the state for training under the G.I. bill and thus were not eligible for subsistence allowance.

Questions and Answers

Q. About a year ago I was informed that all interest charged by the government on loans of World War I veterans' bonus money would be paid back to each veteran who borrowed on his bonus. Eight per cent interest was charged by the government on these loans. Is it true that it is to be repaid?—E. W., North Kansas City, Mo.

A. It would depend upon your status and under what circumstances you received your bonus or loan. Veterans' administration informs me that all World War I veterans with the exception of less than a dozen who were entitled to rebates have been notified and paid. If you did not receive a notification, likely you are not entitled to any repayment, or if you received your money in adjusted service bonds, you are not entitled to reimbursement. However, to be sure, suggest that you write to Mrs. E. M. Robinson, chief, Adjusted Compensation Section, Finance Division, Veterans Administration, Room 4346 Munitions Building, Washington, D. C.

Q. I would like information for two children of a veteran of World War I in regard to their being heirs to a grandfather's estate. Several years ago a childless couple adopted a boy. Later he married and had two children. The grandmother died and within two years the father and mother of these children died. That was in 1942 and two years later the grandfather died in an insane asylum. Have the children of an adopted son the right to the grandfather's property, the same as if it were his own child's children?—C. C., Pewaukee, Wis.

A. With reference to all veterans' affairs, adopted children are regarded as having the same rights as own children. However, in your case, with reference to an estate, suggest that you consult an attorney.

Q. My husband filed application for his terminal leave pay in August, 1946. He received a card saying his claim had been received and filed. He hasn't heard anything since then. Should he write again? The card said the claim was in order and would be received as soon as possible.—Mrs. E. H. B., Charlottesville, Va.

A. It would do little good to write since everything seems to be in order and your husband will receive his bonds and cash as soon as the claim can be processed. However, if you desire to write, send your inquiry to the same finance office to which you made your original claim.

Q. My husband has a breaking-out on his feet that he got overseas. He went to doctors for it and it seems they do him no good. My husband was discharged in March, 1946. Is there anything he can do about it?—F. S., Frost, La.

A. As I understand your letter, your husband is a veteran. If so, it is suggested that he contact the nearest office of Veterans' administration. They will advise him what can be done, or you might have him contact his local Red Cross chapter or any veterans' organization in your city, such as American Legion.

Corn Protein
Corn protein, comprising about 10 per cent of the dry substance of native corn, is now being put to many new uses, although until recently its sole market was as stock feed.

Nylon Family
The word nylon is a generic term and not a trademark. Like "wood" or "glass," it designates a family of related compounds, which may vary as to properties, form or use.

Horses' Legs Lock
Horses can sleep standing up because their legs are provided with muscular mechanism which causes them to lock, making a horse stand as if he were on stilts.

Honey Sources
The major honey sources for the California bee industry are confined to the plants of only eight of the 136 plant families listed for the state.

Watering Plants
Watering newly set plants helps to bring the soil in close contact with the roots and gives the plants a better chance to live and grow.

Milking Machines
Experimentation has shown that an average milking time of three minutes is sufficient with mechanical equipment.

Research Projects
The annual expenditure for research projects in this country is estimated at $500,000,000. The chemical pharmaceutical and petroleum industries lead in the volume of research.

Hands Need Care
During the winter months, hands need special care to keep them soft and attractive looking. Improperly washing and drying your hands is often a cause of chapping.

Used Fans at Rites
Fans were used in religious ceremonies by the Christian church during the Middle Ages. Deacons waved them to drive flies and insects from the sacramental vessels.

More Vitamins
The average yield of vitamins is greater in cabbage harvested in November than in cabbage harvested in May, according to recent tests.

Cracked Dishes
Handle cups with care to prevent chipping and cracking. After dishes are cracked and the glaze is off they are not sanitary.

Cold Waves
Cold waves probably account for approximately $400,000,000 of the two billion dollar a year bill for beauty.

BETTER THAN PILLS FOR CONSTIPATION

Finds Famous Breakfast Cereal Most Helpful of All

Have you given up hope of being "regular" again? Then read this sincere, unsolicited letter:

"I am a registered nurse and I know what a problem constipation is, especially with patients deprived of their usual physical activities. Where pills brought temporary relief, eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly actually prevented irregularity in more cases than I can mention. Your product is a great boon to our modern age." Miss Katherine E. Walsh, Town Hall, Newington, Conn.

Yes, eating ALL-BRAN regularly often brings lasting relief from constipation due to lack of bulk in the diet. For best results, eat it for breakfast every day—and drink plenty of water. Try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN for 10 days! If by that time you are not completely satisfied, send the empty carton to the Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Michigan, and get double your money back!

ALL-BRAN is not a purgative but a wholesome food made from the vital outer layers of whole wheat. Eat daily either as a cereal, or in muffins. Ask your grocer for KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN.

MILES LITTLE PILLS

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. She is upset to find that her brother, Ric, has fallen in love with a divorcee older than himself. Jill is thrown from her horse and hospitalized. Richard visits her mother, Julia, and tells her he has assumed the name of Captain Mackey. Julia determines to keep the truth from her children who have been raised to regard their father as a hero fallen in battle. She realizes too late that she loves Dave Patterson, an old family friend. Richard tells Ric he knew his father, and threatens Sandra with exposure of an illegal divorce if she doesn't leave the boy alone.

CHAPTER XIV

"Let her work this out herself," argued John I., "you can't protect her forever. You've got your own problems."

"And they," Julia sighed, "have no answers in the back of the book." John I. blew his breath out harshly, like a walrus. "How do you know? You won't even look in the back of the book."

"Because I know that what I'm looking for isn't there, John I. It's locked up in my heart, and I think my heart died long ago."

"It was your common sense that died!"

"You're right. I've never argued that you weren't right where Richard was concerned. But I do owe Ric and Jill something, if only to repay them for giving them Richard for their father."

The old man's eyes flashed under his stormy eyebrows. "You talk to Jill about it. You see what she says. She'll tell you to get a divorce in a minute."

"I can't talk to Jill. You know I can't. I can't tear down what little she has of Richard. It would be a wicked thing to do."

"You're taking a big risk, Dooley," John I. said solemnly. "I've warned you, but you're a stubborn woman. I know that fellow better than you do."

She knew too well the risk she took, knew that undoubtedly she was being a fatuous optimist in assuming that Richard would stay away now that he had made the break, now that she knew that he had not been a casualty of the war; every time a car drove in at the gate her heart stopped beating, every time the telephone rang when she was in the house she hurried to answer it, fearing Mamie's sly curiosity, fearing revelation for Jill.

What she would do if Richard came again was a nightmare question that kept dread at her throat like icy fingers. She lay awake at night, tormented by imaginary scenes.

"(Jill, this is your father. He loved you and all of us so little that he stayed away from us and hid behind an assumed name for twenty-five years.)"

What would Jill's reaction be? Richard had that devilish, engaging, deadly charm.

Would Jill hate her father, or answering that curious attraction, the impelling force that psychologists had a name for, would she turn to him and despise her mother for thrusting him out of her life?

It must not happen—but suppose it did happen? Was she being fair to Jill, keeping her in ignorance, unprepared, defenseless? Her hope was that Richard would be transferred, sent overseas, before the great harm she feared could be done. But eventually the war would end.

"When Jill is married it won't matter so much," she told herself. "When Ric has found himself, and they are both settled."

Dave had not come again to Buzzard's Hill, since that day she had sobbed out her torment on his shoulder. Jill remarked about it.

"What's wrong between you and Dave? I hope you didn't blame Dave because I was so awkward I couldn't stick in a saddle?"

"Don't be silly. Of course I didn't blame Dave. He's probably very busy. He's on the ration board, and they've had a great deal to do lately."

Waiting for a Letter From Spang

"They don't work nights, do they?"

"I suspect that they do, being volunteers and having their own businesses to attend to in the daytime. Shall I call Dave and ask him to come over?"

"No, don't call him. Don't you recall all those lectures you used to deliver to me, about how much men resented being called up and coaxed? Don't abandon your principles now."

"Dave's different. He's merely an old friend."

"Jill crooked her mouth dryly. "You're very naive, Julia, my love! Do you usually weep on the bosoms of merely old friends? When your child takes a nose-dive into a briar patch?"

"I'd have wept on any bosom that was handy, then," Julia said with determined airiness, hoping that her face wasn't burning. "I was afraid you'd broken your back. John I. has been doggedly carting away the rocks in the lane ever since. Be sweet to your grandfather, Jill, he's been badly worried about you."

"Did I put that curious, hunted look in his eyes? I've been wondering just what went on here anyway, while I was at the hospital. You and Grandfather both look as though you'd seen ghosts. If Ric were overseas I'd suspect that you were hiding something grim from me, sparing your tender, weakened daughter from a shock. Don't ever do that, Dooley. Dooley—" She jerked erect suddenly, her eyes black wells of terror. "Dooley, it isn't Spang? You haven't heard—aren't you hiding something from me?"

She laughed and patted her cheek. "No, foolish woman, we aren't hiding anything about Spang. I've heard nothing from Spang—only what you've told me."

"I thought he might have crashed—and you were trying to keep me from finding out. But if a letter came for me—Ric might hear something—"

"If a letter came for you, I should

"Read it and tell me what to do."

give it to you. Even if I thought it held bad news, I'd give you credit for having the strength to take it. You're my child."

Jill reached up and pressed her hand. "You lived through it, I suppose I could. But imagining things is worse than really experiencing them, isn't it? Seeing ships torpedoed at sea, and transport planes coming down in flames or crashing horribly! If only I knew something!"

"A lot of women are saying that now, Jill. You're part of an army that needs more courage than the marines."

Ric Writes of His Marriage

"There's another thing that makes my nights hideous," Jill burrowed her head into the curve of her mother's arm. "What if he does come through safe, and then when he gets back he doesn't want me? It could happen. They change. War changes them."

Julia turned to the window, knowing well that an involuntary spasm had drained and tightened her face. But her voice came, level and quietly controlled. "Other women have lived through that, too, Jill."

"I couldn't. I'd die of humiliation. I'd drown myself in the cowpond, where it's deep and muddy." "Oh, no, you wouldn't. You'd hold your head high and never show how badly you were hurt, and after a while you'd love some one else, some one worthy to be loved."

"You say that as though you meant it. Dorothy Dix would be proud of you. But you don't mean it, of course. No woman could get over a thing like that. She might put on a good act, but she'd never stop hurting deep inside because she'd given her heart away and got only a ragged wound instead. If Spang discards me, I'm not going to be nobly brave. I'm going to be tough and break men's hearts and laugh. I'm going to throw away every moral scruple. You watch and see!"

"If I believed any of that, I'd be alarmed. But I don't believe it. You're my child."

"I had two parents, didn't I? You always assume that I'm a miniature of you, Dooley. I'm not. There's a desperate kind of thing in me that you don't know about. Something you wouldn't even understand." Jill's eyes were big and filled with wildness. "I could hurt people. I could hurt myself. That's the kind of McFarlane I am. Not your kind at all."

"I respect your individuality," she said. "You're not a child now, you're a person. What you do is your own responsibility."

But Jill's eyes had flashed away to the window. Beyond it she could see old John I. trudging up the drive with the mail.

"Quick, Dooley!" Her mood changed swiftly to one of breathless eagerness. "Maybe there's a letter."

There was no letter from Spang. But there was a letter from Ric.

Julia read it slowly, keeping her face from showing the consternation that she was feeling. Jill said, "If that's from Ric you needn't tell me what's in it. I know. Please send me a little cash!"

"Yes—it's the same old thing," Julia evaded, trying to smile, trying to be natural. Jill mustn't know yet. She wanted to talk to John I. She wanted advice. She went out of the house and walked up to the lane gate, and when John I. came tramping back from the barn he saw her there, sitting on the old mounting block, her face a taut, gray mask of misery.

"What's wrong?" he asked. "Heard from that fellow again? I thought that letter I got for you was from Ric?"

"It was from Ric." She handed him the crumpled page. "You'd better read it, John I. Read it and tell me what to do."

The old man pulled a worn spectacle case from his back pocket, set a second pair of spectacles astride his nose. He dropped down beside her, and his lips moved slowly as he read the letter.

Dear Dooley (Ric had written):

Sorry for this abrupt letter, but this is it. I'm taking off, don't know where. Transferred to some lousy school or other. Very sudden. No explanation, of course. Not in this army. I meant to try for a pass and see you myself. I'd rather have told you this than had to write it. Dooley, I'm married. She's the sweetest, loveliest girl I've ever met. Her name is Sandra, and life has been hard on her, but she has been brave and sweet through it all. That's what makes it so hard now. I can't take care of her or protect her. I can't even have her with me, not till I rate something better than a private. I can't even feed her. And she's my wife. I was going to bring her home, but that's out now, so all I can do is send her to you with a prayer. Be good to her, Mother. She's swell, and you're so swell you'll get along fine, I know. She'll wire you when to meet her. Tell the others hello. And don't worry about me. I'll be all right.

Love,

RIC.

Jill's eyes were blazing, Jill's face was white as a sheet. John I. was doggedly pretending to eat his supper, but Julia—after putting butter on a biscuit three times and slopping coffee on her napkin because her hands shook so—had given up. Mamie was in and out of the swing door, hearing everything.

Jill said, "Oh, the fool! The poor deluded fool!"

Julia said, "If you knew about this girl, Jill, you should have told us. Something might have been done to stop this mad marriage."

"Girl—she's no girl! I know it's the same one. And I suppose it's my fault. I should have told you, but I didn't want to worry you. I thought Ric would be shipped out, and it would all blow over. She must have worked fast. Dooley, she's a grass widow, she's years older than Ric."

"But you don't actually know that this is the woman, Jill. Her name is Sandra, Ric says."

"I know. Sandra Calvert. She was married to a Lieutenant Colonel, Spang said, and when he was sent away from Ridley, she stayed and got a divorce. Now she's just a camp-follower. She's a chemical blonde with a greedy mouth and hard eyes. You aren't going to let her come here? This is my home, it's Grandfather's home, too. Even Mamie has been here for years. I won't have it. Tell her she can't do it, Grandfather."

Julia said, unhappily, "Jill, please! What can we do? This is Ric's home, too. This woman is Ric's wife."

"Dooley, if that woman comes into this house, I'll leave!"

Jill Issues An Ultimatum

Julia gripped her unsteady hands in her lap. Dying, she was thinking, would be a little like this. Richard, her son, her handsome lad, the boy she had loved so much! She felt as though she were sinking into a deep, icy pit.

Jill went on ruthlessly, "We can't have her here, you know that. It would be horrible." She jumped up, her fork clattered to the floor. "I'm going to send that creature a telegram right now and tell her she won't be welcome here. I suppose she's still at that hotel. Mrs. Richard and McFarlane Jr.! Oh, Dooley, when I think of a woman like that having your name, I could kill Ric! I'm going to send a wire this minute, and no one is going to stop me."

Julia flew. "Jill! Not over that party-line, please!"

Jill put down the telephone. "I don't see what difference it makes. Everybody will know it by tomorrow, anyway."

JESUS WASHES THE DISCIPLES' FEET

LESSON TEXT—John 13:3-15, 34, 35.

MEMORY SELECTION—A new commandment I give unto you, that ye love one another; as I have loved you, that ye also love one another.—John 13:34.

On the eve of his crucifixion our Lord gave to his followers a striking example of how true humility shows itself in service to others.

Almost in the shadow of the cross the disciples had fallen into an argument about which of them should be greatest. Christ showed them the way of true greatness by an act of menial service, giving them an example for their own lives, a pattern of love.

I. Action (vv. 3-11).

He who was about to wash his disciples' feet was fully conscious who he was, whence he came, what his power was, and where he was going.

Verse 3 gives us a clear view of our Lord's knowledge of himself as divine, sent by the Father and to return to him. He was conscious that he was King of kings and Lord of lords—all things had been put into his hands.

What followed would seem to be a mistake—a misfit in the pattern of the life of a being so great as the one described in verse 3—except for the fact that it was Jesus of whom it was said.

He knew that real greatness proves itself in the ability to stoop if need be to minister to the humblest need. It was just like Jesus to take the place of the servant. It is just like him to do the loving, thoughtful, compassionate thing for us today.

Peter's impulsive refusal to be washed enabled the Lord to teach him, and us, a needed lesson. The one who had come clean and well-groomed to the feast needed only to have the dust of the road cleansed from his sandaled feet.

Just so the one who has been cleansed from his sins by the blood of Christ returns daily for the cleansing of the stains and soil of the journey through this wicked world. We must remember that this constant cleansing (I John 1:7) is necessary. It is not enough to make a decision for Christ and receive salvation; we need his daily grace for daily living.

II. Example (vv. 12-15).

When he resumed his place at the table, Jesus faced a humbled and ashamed group of men ready to have driven home to their hearts the powerful meaning of the example which had been set before them.

They called him Lord and Master, and he agreed that they were right. Now he had set them a pattern of lowly service. They had already sensed the rebuke involved, so he stressed only the positive side, the need for them to do what he had done.

It is one thing to understand what has been taught, it is another thing to put it into practice. Jesus conditioned his blessing on the doing, rather than the hearing (see vv. 16, 17).

We are told in James 1:22 that the one who is a hearer of the Word and not a doer of it is self-deceived. He is fooling himself about his supposed spiritual progress. God is not deceived by it, and usually his fellow men are not deceived by his profession of what he does not have. How sad then to go on deceiving himself and how foolish.

III. Command (vv. 34, 35).

It is really not a matter of choice for the believer whether he will live in the light of this great example—it is a commandment of God. Oh, yes, it is a commandment of love, but that makes it not less but more binding on us who believe in Christ.

By act and example he set before his disciples the great and new commandment of love, expressing it in loving service.

The measure of our love for our brethren is the love of Christ Jesus. That love, we all agree, was without limit, unbelievably great, inexpressibly tender, infinite in its purpose and power.

We cannot measure up to it. What then shall we do? Surely we must give to our very limit and beyond that limit by God's grace, of our love for one another. Nothing less will do, if we are to keep his commandment.

Such love between Christian brethren has always been the most effective kind of testimony for Christ. As men see true and sacrificial love shown between Christians, they are drawn to Christ and the church. The opposite is also true. Divisions and strife among believers quickly become known to the world, and are always a ground for scornful rejection of the truth which the church professes to believe and is asking the world to accept. We cannot effectively apply the gospel remedy (and it is the only remedy!) to a strife-torn world while we are engaged in unlovely battles with one another. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples," said Jesus, "if ye have love one for another."

HORNS AND ANTLERS

Horns and antlers are similar in appearance, but they differ in structure. A horn is a hollow outgrowth of the skin, and is partially filled by a bony core. Antlers are solid, bone-like growths attached to the skull. They are found only on members of the deer family.

Horns, which are a characteristic of sheep, cattle, and antelope; vary widely in shape and size. Unlike antlers, they are not shed every year but are permanent. Usually they are two in number, although there may be only a single one. They may be straight or curved, and the surface may be ringed or smooth or ridged. Generally they are not branched, although the American prong buck possesses branched horns. The horns of the prongbuck, unlike those of sheep and cattle, are shed annually. The horny sheath gradually loosens and becomes freed from the skin around the base. When the horn falls off it leaves the bony core covered with blackish skin. A new sheath begins to develop on the tip of the core, and grows toward the base and at tip until a new horn is fully developed.

A still different kind of horn like structure is that on the snout of the rhinoceros, whose horn is made of densely matted hairs.

Antlers are different from horns in that they are solid and deciduous; that is, they are shed every year, usually late in the winter. New ones begin growing a month or two later. When new antlers are to be formed, the bumps where the old antlers grew receive an increased supply of blood and this blood deposits the bony material which gradually builds up into a new set of antlers. During their growth the antlers are covered with soft, hairy skin which is called the velvet. When the growth of the antlers has been completed the velvet dries and is rubbed off against trees and bushes.

Antlers are of various shapes and sizes. In some deer they are merely short, simple spikes, but the antlers of the wapiti or moose may be enormous, and either branched or hand-shaped. A new branch is usually added each year, until the animal is mature, but when a buck passes his prime the antlers gradually become smaller.

Primitive men found a great many uses for horns and antlers taken from dead animals. Neanderthal man flaked flint with antlers and used the prong-points as daggers. Later Stone Age men used antlers to make picks for mining flint. Here in North America antlers were used for flaking flint by pressure, to make smooth and delicately worked arrowheads.

From very early times, horns have been used for signaling and as musical instruments. Some primitive people believed that there was magical power in the sounds of certain horns.

For many years the Chinese have used the groundup horn of the rhinoceros and the velvet from antlers as a medicine. A rhinoceros horn was believed to make poison harmless. The Chinese also carved rhinoceros horn into beautiful cups.

All sorts of horns were cleaned and polished and used by peoples other than the Chinese for drinking cups and containers. Horns were often carved into ladles and spoons. The Haida Indians on the northwest coast of North America used the horns of mountain sheep and goats for such purposes. Certain African tribes used the long, straight horns of the beisa antelope as spear points. Such horns were also carved as handles and fitted onto swords.

Before men had discovered the process of making glass, thin slabs of horn were sometimes used in windows. Horn instead of glass is still used in parts of Asia where people fit thin sheets of it into lanterns. Horns were symbols of strength and power to the early Germans and Norsemen, who fashioned their helmets with horns on either side. Furniture and houses, too,

A scene of quiet beauty and peace . . . The picture above gives an idea of how Chicago's International Amphitheatre will look during the 24th National Flower and Garden Show, to be held March 16 to 23. A fortune of flowers from all parts of the United States and abroad will turn the vast Amphitheatre into a Spring fairyland weeks before flowers begin to bloom outdoors.

$25,000 IN PRIZES OFFERED IN NATIONAL FLOWER SHOW

Prizes totaling $25,000 will be offered at the 24th National Flower and Garden Show, to be held at the International Amphitheatre in Chicago March 16 to 23, it was announced by James Sykora, Chicago chairman of the show, who said that a fortune in flowers from all over the United States and abroad already has been entered in the exhibition.

"The outstanding success of the last National Flower Show, held at the Chicago Amphitheatre in 1942," said Sykora, "resulted in an overwhelming request that the show return to this city."

Hundreds of spectacular exhibits from commercial and amateur entrants, he declared, will turn the Amphitheatre into a Spring fairyland of beauty and colors. Women's clubs, garden clubs, horticultural societies and other interested groups from a wide area around Chicago will sponsor exhibits in the amateur section.

The show will be part of the 24th National Flower and Garden Show, an interesting historical event. One of the outstanding features of the group will be the display of a Ninth Century monastery garden.

"Visitors to the show will be thrilled," said Sykora, "at seeing, in the garden section, a bright Spring garden consisting of more than 15,000 variegated tulips, hyacinths and narcissi sent all the way from Holland as a goodwill gesture by the famous bulb-growers of that country."

Other exhibits expected to attract attention of scores of thousands of persons are the rainbow flower garden, displayed by Clavey's Ravinia Nurseries, and a Korean Garden, created by Billy Baxter, famous landscape architect from Detroit, who designed the spectacular Crescendo Falls for the 1942 Flower Show. "The big 1947 show," said Sy-kora, "will be a treasure-house of ideas for the amateur and back-yard gardener. A special college section will feature latest developments in floriculture and horticulture. There will be special gardens for the small home, as well as formal and rock gardens. Even window-box gardens will receive attention."

Of the more exotic plants, he said, there will be strange and grotesque cacti, giant flowered amaryllises, flaming tulips, African violets, gigantic Creole and Croft lilies, roses with six-foot stems and rare and expensive orchids in profusion.

The objective of the show, sponsored by the Society of American Florists, declared Sykora, is to inspire people to beautify their homes and gardens through flowers and plants, thereby making their communities better places for the American way of living.

AT THE THEATRES

A romantic story, with the setting at the Philadelphia 1876 Centennial Exposition, is told in "Centennial Summer", with Jeanne Crain, Cornel Wilde and Constance Bennett, which will open at the Roxy theatre at Lockport Sunday for three days.

Romantic complications are brought about when two sisters fall in love with their aunt's nephew by marriage, who has come to the Exposition to handle the French exhibit. One of the sisters is wooed by another man, whose obstetric profession shocks her right out of his arms and then back again after she finds the competition given by her sister is much closer than she anticipates. The musical score for the picture was written by Jerome Kern.

"Caesar and Cleopatra", with Claude Rains and Vivien Leigh, will be featured attraction at the Roxy theatre next Wednesday and Thursday.

were decorated with horns and antlers. Today, horn is used throughout the world in the manufacture of many useful and ornamental articles, such as handles of walking sticks, umbrellas, and carving knives. Horn is easily carved yet it is tough and durable, and will bend easily. When it is heated in water it becomes soft. Then it can be molded and pressed into desired shapes. It may be split into thin sheets, or pieces may be welded together in both heat and pressure are applied. The horn article may then be polished or dyed.
